

Texas Representative Roberto R. Alonzo's

Capitol Report

Immigration Roundtable

On March 8, US Congressman Luis Gutierrez from Illinois visited Dallas and met with long standing friend Roberto R. Alonzo, who introduced him to new friend US Congressman Marc Veasey to discuss immigration. Dallas is one of the three largest metropolitan cities that has the largest percentage of Mexican immigrants. At Mountain View College, the officials debated and openly discussed important issues dealing with immigration; immigration reform, the conversation in D.C., racial discrimination, and the current protocols to obtain permanent residency. The route and accessibility to permanent citizenship is crucial during this economy hardship because after all our country was developed and founded by immigrants. As history shows, immigrant participation to active citizenship does not hinder America's progress, it only strengthens it.
